

If corporations own more than just a few communication devices, we run the risk of getting biased and censored information that is based on the company's prerogative. For example, cable television, radio stations, news stations would all control the information Americans get about the world around them.